STUDENT LOANS

College costs frequently add up to more than students or their parents expect. If this is the case, consider a Federal PLUS loan. The Federal PLUS (Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students) Loan Program makes low-interest loans available to parents or stepparents of dependent undergraduate students. A parent may borrow up to the cost of attendance at an educational institution minus any financial aid the student receives. The good news for parents is that the interest is tax deductible for qualified individuals.

Students may still need to go through the FAFSA process before their parents can receive this loan (this is determined by each school). If the PLUS loan is a supplement to the loan award, however, they do not have to fill out another FAFSA (parent's information is requested on the student's FAFSA).
